Location Number Request

The United States Department of Agriculture (USDA) and State agencies, in cooperation with producers, are developing an Animal Disease Traceability framework that will enhance existing animal health programs by enabling better tracing of the movements of any diseased or exposed animal.

Location information is needed by animal health officials to quickly and effectively respond to disease incidents. The California Department of Food and Agriculture (CDFA) is facilitating the process to obtain a Location Number for places involved in livestock production or commerce in California. Participation in the program is voluntary.

1. Provide the physical address (PO Boxes are not allowed) for the location where an animal agriculture activity (i.e., beef ranch, saleyard, poultry ranch, etc.) takes place. This is the location where the animals are housed. If appropriate, you can obtain separate numbers for each location where livestock production or commerce occurs.
2. Provide contact information for each location (name, phone number, etc.). This should be the person that animal health officials will contact in the event of a disease incident.
3. Check the box for the location primary activity (i.e., Farm or Ranch, Saleyard, Exhibition, etc.). List any additional operations at the site (i.e., poultry farm with an egg processing operation, etc.).
4. For farms or ranches, check the appropriate box for the primary type of animals at this site (i.e., cattle, pigs, sheep, etc.). List all other types of livestock and poultry at the location.

Each additional location or an update to a location with an existing Location Number requires a separate application (Page 2) to be submitted.

You can mail, fax, or email the completed form to CDFA. For more information, call (866) 325-5681.
